After the Storm, a Calm

Wednesday.

For some days after the shooting of John H. Lynch excitement was its highest pitch. Men talked in low tones, but with deep earnestness, about the necessity of some organization by the people for their own protection and safety. Had the tragic event resulting in Lynch's death occurred in the daytime it is very doubtful whether the officers could have saved Harrington from the vengeance of a long-suffering and outraged people; but the foul deed was committed at night, after nearly all had retired for rest, and so the offender against the law was locked up without any demonstration on the part of the populace. Hopes were also entertained that Lynch might realso entertained that Lynch might re-cover, and so, in the absence of any organization, and without a leader, there was nothing done. The killing of Ash so soon after the burial of Lynch tended to keep alive the feeling of insecurity which pervaded the popular mind. It was remembered that the Grand Jury, was remembered that the Grand Jury, composed of good and true men, was then in session, and that the murderers were in jail. These reflections doubtless had the effect to allay the popular feeling, and from a feverish excitement which prevailed a week ago the populer mind has relapsed into a state of quiet acquiescence. The people, although apparently so indifferent to what has occurred so recently in our midst, are really wide awake to the situation in which they have been placed by the circumstance of their geographical locacumstance of their geographical loca-tion. Pioche is known as a rich mining camp, and so is attractive on that ac-count to the desperado, the footpad and the ruffian, besides the various classes who live by their wits, as well as to men of brain power and indomitable energy. Pioche is a central point for Montana, Idaho, Utah, Nevada and Northern Aritona, and here are congregated some of the worst men in the world, who have fled from other sections to escape pun-ishment either by law or at the hands of an outraged populace. This is the cause of the frequency of murder and other crimes here. But there is still hope among our best citizens that in allowing the law to take its course the guilty will the law to take its course the guilty will not be permitted to go unpunished. All have an abding faith in the integrity and intelligence of the present Grand Jury, and that indictments for murder will be presented in three cases of men now in the County Jail. Let the prose-cution be conducted vigorously, and let trial jurors do their duty as between the State and the accused and all will be State and the accused, and all will be well. But if, through any mere techni-cality, a red-handed murderer is turned canry, a red-nanced marnerer is turned loose upon the community we very much fear that there will be a popular outbreak, and that the people will take the law into their own hands.

Thereubon K. J. Hanley put in an appearance and replevined the property from the Sheriff. So the matter rests at present, but the question in regard to the ownership will be determined at some future time, and before the District Court. In the meanwhile the rights of creditors and the Sheriff also are secured.

in Incident in Juli Life.

There is a motley crowd in the County Juit awaiting the action of the Grand '59. Jury, and the number of cells is found inadequate for the confinement of each to himself; hence the necessity of adopting some sort of police regulation among themselves. With the concurrence of the authorities the prisoners have chosen one of their number to keep watch during the daytime, and another for a similar duty in the night. In this way, and by the close confinement of the most refractory, order is maintained in the prison. But occasionally a fellow is brought in for a minor offense, and feeling, perhaps, that he is higher in the social scale than his fellow-prisoners who are accused of felonies, essays to put on airs, but he invariably gets the worst of the bargain. Night before last Phil. Malloy was incarcerated for simply firing his pistol at random. Being somewhat trate when he arrived, the surroundings had no soothing effect upon his troubled spirit; he became bellicos—so much so, indeed, that it became necessary to deal summarily with the offender against the peace and "dignity" of the inmates of the County Jail, and they proceeded, without unnecessary ceremony, to put a head on the obdurate and unruly inter-loper. They pummeled him till they closed both eyes so that he will head loper. They pummeled him till they closed both eyes, so that he will hardly be able to see at all for a week to come. Having some 25 days to remain, unless his fine was paid, friends interceded and amount which stood against raised the him, upon the payment of which he was discharged, glad to be released from such a law-abiding set as occupies the County Jail. If anybody gets in jail here he must conduct himself with propriety or suffer the consequences.
